US envoy reckoned coup lacked support

June 2 report said 2 military groups out to oust GMA

The US Embassy in Manila said President Gloria Arroyo faces a serious US risk early Sunday morning provides an occasion for a demonstration at the University of the Philippines to protest her administration's firing of foreign consultants on proposed power projects. (See related story on page A1.)

By Herman Bordador

THE US EMBASSY TOLD WASHINGTON in June that two groups in the Philippine military had planned to oust President Gloria Arroyo even before the worst crisis of her presidency erupted but indicated the plots would not succeed, a report released yesterday by the bureau said.

US Charge Officer Joseph Mussomeli, in a June report, said "several credible sources" should have planned to conduct a coup in June.

A report by Mussomeli dated April 21, 2005, made available on Sunday, said Arroyo's public support had waned and the military had been told that elements in the Armed Forces were moving to force her to resign.

US Embassy press attaché Michael Linscott declined to comment on the report Mussomeli issued in June as well as the April 21 document.

Mussomeli appeared to be citing documents allegedly stolen from files of the US Embassy in Manila by a Filipino activist.

US envoy reckoned coup lacked support

By Benigno Aquino III

The files were said to have been passed on to former Philippine National Police Senior Supt. Michael Ray Aquino, who had fled to America to escape murder charges in the Philippines. The two are facing rape charges in a US court.

The pilfered documents were alleged to have been sent subsequently to opposition politicians in Manila.

The June 2 report said Mr. Arroyo had "failed to meet expectations" and had lost public support. It mentioned a determined plan to reverse the results of the 2004 presidential election and a plot involving an "opposition-led core committee of leaders."

"Information from the military and civilian contacts describes two separate military factions plotting to remove Arroyo. A radical group of junior officers and a more cautious group of flag officers," said the three-page report.

Young officers

The younger officers reportedly had planned to oust Arroyo and support an opposition-led core committee of leaders. The exact date for action may shift as the two groups keep an eye on the political situation," the June report said.

"But the generals have indicated that they will be compelled to act before the reassignments and reorganizations announced in July 2005," it added.

The report was drafted a few days before the "Mukd Dam" conversations between Mr. Arroyo and British Commissioned Virginia Gault. The revelations, which allegedly pointed to election fraud, triggered widespread calls for the resignation of the President.

The June report mentioned an "opposition-led core committee of leaders," even as the idea of a transition council had not yet been published until the House inquiry into the Gaultino writup and the process that followed it.

"Plans by opposition groups would begin with civilian demonstrations or strikes that could provide an environment for military action," the report said.

According to sensitive reporting, former President Joseph Estrada's determination to reverse the results of last year's presidential election, for instance, might trigger such a confrontation," it added.

Prior to the release of the revelations, the administration had already been embroiled in claims in a Senate hearing that Mr. Arroyo's family had received illegal gambling payoffs.

Mussomeli's report mentioned "potential triggers" for military action against Mr. Arroyo but added "several critical factors... (that) should lead plotters to conclude a coup is premature."

The report showed the US Embassy expected a widespread transport and labor strike in June, particularly on June 12, that would have led Mr. Arroyo to declare a state of emergency. The demonstrations could have been a trigger, it said.

Division in labor groups

Last month, the transport group and labor union endorsed a national strike but divisions and lack of support among union leaders have put on the back burner plans for a general strike that might provide Mr. Arroyo with a "state of emergency," the June report said.

Another supposed trigger was the mid-year personnel movement in the Armed Forces.

"Thirty years at this time (referring to July 2005), officers are promoted, transferred or retired. Senior anti-Arroyo officers may feel compelled to act before they are moved to other positions or retired," the report added.

"Several critical factors, however, should lead plotters to conclude a coup is premature," the report said.

The political cover, in addition to the problem of a lack of protest, civilian support may be in doubt," it said. The report said that while the two military groups were talking to each other, "senior reporting indicates civilian anti-Arroyo groups, including the Church, business groups and labor, have backed away from consistent military efforts to involve them in the plot."

"Estrada's stay here in Manila, which could make his Arroyo strategy, or their own manipulation, if the military takes over," the report added.

There was also "no guarantee of success."

"Key assets are currently under the command of Arroyo leaders, and Arroyo's intelligence services are generally believed to have been monitoring individuals suspected of opposing him," the report said.

"In view of the substantial number of plotters—it is a virtual certainty that Arroyo is aware of the plotting," it added.

The report also mentioned the absence of a "post-Arroyo government plan."

According to our sources, the opposition has not indicated as to what type of transition government will be installed after Mr. Arroyo is removed, or who would lead it," the report said.

A civilian government, which would call for new elections within a year, has some support among some observers. However, several diplomats maintained that they are skeptical that radical military elements could given support to a report from Manila.

Erap: So what's new?

FORMER PRESIDENT JOSEPH ESTRADA said yesterday he agreed with the analysis of former US Embassy Charge d'Affaires Joseph Mussomeli about the Philippine situation but noted the latter's report seemed to have been culled from analyses made by security circles.

"They are saying the same thing. It appears that one copied from another. So what is new?" Estrada said in a statement.

Estrada said he had no copy of the Mussomeli paper, which also said that the current President seemed to have benefited "substantially" from Mr. Arroyo's rising popularity.

Administration legislators saw the Mussomeli report as the type of document opposition members would be interested in to promote the destabilization of Mr. Arroyo.

Lance del Rio, Sr. Executive Director, said the report could have been one of the files supposedly stolen from FBI computers and given to personalities involved in destabilization efforts.

Banked Rep. Monica Pantoja of Lulu said: "Estrada knew from the Mussomeli report wrong." Reports from Arroyo's floor and House members.

anti-constitutionalists (AC).

Bolles, a leader of a dissident group which rose against the late dictator Ferdinand Marcos, said the Mussomeli report could also have been directed at retired soldiers.

"It's a double-edged sword. It's also warning elements in the military if they're planning violent moves, they [the soldiers] will answer their place," Bolles said.

Gizmo questions report

Bolles threatened that the US government linked the Mussomeli report, in the same way that the Federal Bureau of Investigation published the arrest of its Filipino American analyst and of former police officer Michael Ray Aquino for espionage, as a ruse to criticize the administration.

"This is an excuse to discuss the facts of Gloria by publishing unflattering reports about her... They can always say they can't stop this because there's an ongoing investigation," he said.

"This will open the floodgates of critical assessment of Gloria."

Sen. Rodolfo Biazon, a former Armed Forces chief of staff, said the accuracy of the Mussomeli report was questionable.

"Yes, there were signs of agitation... The police officers were questioning a lot of things. But a coup, I never heard of it," Biazon stressed in an interview. "So this poses a question of accuracy on the information gathered by Mussomeli."

Arroyo's 'yes' men

Biazon laughed off the report's reference to hard-core supporters whom Mr. Arroyo could call in case of a coup attempt.

"That's ridiculous. I don't think any group will be willing to fight for GMA. Unless you are referring to the 'yes' lawmakers," he chuckled, referring to the congressmen who recently quashed the impeachment cases against the President.

A senior official at the Department of Foreign Affairs said concluding analyses of the political and economic situation in last month were part of the responsibilities of embassies and consulates.

"Don't imagine if their government reads something about the Philippines in the newspapers and the US Embassy had not given them any report at all. That means they are not doing their job," DFA Assistant Secretary for American Affairs Ariel Abadilla told the Inquirer.

"In the same manner, we also make analysis of the political and economic situation in our host countries."

Abadilla said such analyses helped the home government to "plot accordingly" in case there was "a change of government or a need to revitalize national, like what happened in Iraq."

"These analyses contain a blow-by-blow account of the situation in the country. That's normal for embassies to do," he said.

Embassy silence

The US Embassy, for the second day, maintained its silence on the leak-out report.

"As of this moment, we don't have any comment. If that changes, I'll let you," US Embassy press attache Barbara Lonsdale said.

Asked why the embassy would not comment, Lonsdale replied: "I don't need to comment that."

Transcripts of Mussomeli's indecisive interviews in June and July, the lastest months of the Arroyo administration, were still posted on the US Embassy website, <http://usemb-philippines.gov>.

Three scenarios

Interviewed on July 8 over GMA 7, Mussomeli had said his government would not support unconstitutional means to oust Mr. Arroyo.

"We see at least three different scenarios of that sort. A military coup of some sort, the imposition of martial law by the government, or some sort of people power movement," Mussomeli said.

"I think all three of those could be disruptive to the long-term interests of the Philippines and so we would oppose them, yes."

Military officers could not be reached for comment on the Mussomeli report.

Armed Forces spokesperson Lt. Col. Benigno Aquino III turned off his mobile phone. Brig. Gen. Jose Angel Hernandez, civil relations group chief, put in his phone ring and refused to pick up the call.

Taliban raids fail to deter historic Afghan vote

AN AFGAN WOMAN casts her ballot in a polling station in Kabul on Sept. 18.

Key events leading to assembly polls

KABUL—AFGHANS VOTED UNDER DOUBTFUL security Sunday to elect their first new parliament for more than 30 years. The following is a chronology of key events in the run-up to the Sept. 18, 2005, election.

Sept. 17, 2001—More than 3,000 people are killed in New York and Washington in attacks against the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Oct. 7—First U.S.-led military strikes launched on Afghanistan as the Taliban fail to meet U.S. demands to hand over the leaders.

Nov. 13—Northern Alliance forces enter Kabul following an overnight push by Taliban troops. The system of the capital follows a power grab against Taliban forces across northern Afghanistan.

Dec. 6—The Taliban agrees to surrender its last stronghold of Kandahar and expunge leader Mullah Mohammad Omar from the city.

Dec. 22—Hamid Karzai is sworn in as head of a 50-member post-Taliban government following agreements reached in Bonn, Germany, laying down a timetable for Afghanistan's transition to democracy.

April 18, 2002—Former king Zahir Shah, 87, returns from 29 years' exile in Rome.

June 13—Karzai elected for a two-year term by Afghanistan's traditional grand assembly, the Loya Jirga. Under U.S. pressure, Taliban fighters withdraw from Kabul.

Sept. 3—Karzai swears inauguration ceremony in Kandahar. The same day 30 Afghans are killed in car bomb explosion in Kabul.

March 17, 2003—U.S.-led coalition forces launch Operation Enduring Freedom, targeting al-Qaeda and Taliban forces.

May 28—Coalition of 10 provinces and leading warlords agree to support authority of central government following a formal appeal by Karzai.

June 7—Public consultation process launched throughout Afghanistan with a view to adopting a new constitution.

Aug. 11—Secretary General of International Security Assistance Force declares that Afghanistan is not the threat to world peace that the Sept. 11 attacks were.

Oct. 4, 2004—Loya Jirga approves new constitution, establishing a presidential system of government.

Jan. 16—The International Security Assistance Force launches Operation Enduring Freedom, targeting al-Qaeda and Taliban forces.

March 20—Karzai announces presidential and parliamentary elections scheduled for June will be delayed until September.

March 30—British forces conduct a raid on a Taliban training camp in the north.

July 5—General election commission announces presidential elections will be on Oct. 9, but delays pre-inauguration polls until 2006.

Oct. 9—First post-Taliban presidential elections pass off with little bloodshed despite militant threats.

Nov. 3—Karzai proclaimed winner with 55 percent of vote.

Dec. 7—Karzai inaugurates ceremony attended by US Vice President Dick Cheney and Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld.

KABUL—TALIBAN FIGHTERS launched a series of attacks on Sunday as Afghans voted in their first legislative election in decades while more lashed by President Hamid Karzai as a stifling obstacle to the nation's struggle to rebuild.

How then, a dozen attacks were launched across the southeast and two provinces were flung into a civil compound near an election center in Kabul shortly after polls opened. Only one exploded, slightly wounding an Afghan worker, an election official said.

Several hours earlier, two prisoners and three insurgents were killed in an ambush near the Taliban border and a Taliban fighter was killed in an overnight attack on a polling station in southern Kandahar province in the south, officials said.

But the threat of violence by the Taliban did not deter many voters, who reflected the desire to elect parliamentarians and candidates for the first time since 1965.

"This is happy, I couldn't sleep last night and now watching the clock to come out to vote," said Qari Zohairuddin, 21, at a polling station in the semi-city of Jalalabad.

About 12.5 million Afghans are registered to vote in the $1.5 billion, U.S.-funded polls for a lower house of parliament and roughly half 34 provinces.

Residents in some parts of the country could voting in the first few hours was slow.

About 140,000 staff are on duty in more than 4,000 polling stations in most of the main roads and remote towns in the north, from the coast to the south to valleys among the snow-capped Hindu Kush mountains in the north.

"It is the day of self-determination for the Afghan people," Karzai said in a speech after voting at a family group of mosque house.

That is why we are making history after 30 years of war, intervention, occupation and misery."

The Taliban council has failed to disrupt preparations for the poll, which began nearly four years after 22,000 troops drove the fundamentalist Islamists from power.

Powering voters are about 140,000 troops, including about 20,000 from a U.S.-led force and 120,000 from Afghan troops.

Seven candidates and six poll workers were killed in the run-up to the ballot. Attacks from two provinces into the house of a candidate in Kandahar province in the run-up to the vote.

The Taliban was not hurt but five family members were wounded, police said.

A U.S. military spokesman said there had been attacks in more than a dozen in the southern and western provinces of Ghazni, Kandahar and Kunar in which at least six Afghan troops and one U.S. soldier were wounded.

"We are taking burning attacks—small arms, rocket grenades and all type of small, pretty much through out the east and southeast of Afghanistan," said Col. Dan Young, referring to improved explosive devices.

Taliban spokesperson Abdul Latif Zakariya said military had carried out 27 attacks including the rocket attack in Kabul.

The elections are the final part of an international plan to restore democracy in the Muslim country after the Taliban overthrew the previous phase, Karzai was proclaimed election last year, the first in the nation's history.

Younis Qureshi, who came second in Karzai in the presidential vote and now leads an opposition bloc, criticized the inclusion of political parties from the previous but nonetheless, urged people to vote.

There have to be complete transparency, ballot papers, a roll order for many Afghans who are illiterate and have no experience in voting. Al-Jazeera

Doctors brace for 'second disaster' after Katrina

By Maggie Fox

NEW ORLEANS—DOCTORS ARE bracing themselves for what they call a "second disaster" as residents of New Orleans and surrounding areas return to their devastated city.

While reconstruction from the long-term disaster to health from possibly polluted floodwaters and recovery of disaster relief, first-line emergency doctors say the actual health danger will come from accidents.

"The second wave of disaster is when you see some of the people back and the infrastructure of the city is not in place," said Dr. Bruce DeBenedictis, an emergency room doctor at downtown New Orleans' Charity Hospital.

Officials in New Orleans and around the Gulf Coast are bracing themselves to meet the needs of the thousands of people who have been displaced and are now in the area. "It is a tremendous task," said Dr. DeBenedictis.

He said the first wave of disaster is when you see some of the people back and the infrastructure of the city is not in place. "It is a tremendous task," said Dr. DeBenedictis.

turn to New Orleans with only first aid supplies and no running water, and no electricity in New Orleans proper.

Quoting the city's chief public health officer, Dr. DeBenedictis said, "We will have a second disaster if we don't get the water and electricity back."

The CDC Center for Disease Control and Prevention is launching an education effort to caution people about the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning if they use generators.

While some areas have no power, some have power. "We are not going to have a second disaster if we don't get the water and electricity back," said Dr. DeBenedictis.

Scam delays Aurora folk's resettlement

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—ALLEGED irregularities in the purchase of a 1.8-hectare property and land claims by farmers have delayed the resettlement of more than 1,000 families left homeless by last year's flash floods and landslides in Davao, Aurora.

Reports gathered by the in-house during the construction of new houses in Saragosa Compañía has been stopped for more than a month now since the town council ordered on Aug. 1 a resolution asking the Distribución to investigate Mayor Jaime Yndia, budget officer Esther B. Ipe and other officials for the supposed intentional suppression of that land, article 24 of No. 20.

The court's decision said the museum lacked a remedy concerning the seizure of the artifacts, which it said it dropped then the items were in the hands of a third party. The Department of Culture and Tourism, a verification from the national antiquities authority, said the museum neither sold nor loaned the artifacts to the third party and a local archaeological museum bought the items.

Manmohan Singh said the agency would formally recommend to Manmohan Singh to buy out DWT 3 from MPTC. He said the move would relieve the government of almost $2 billion in interest payments to the consortium.

The net present value of the contract with MFT, he said, included a 25-percent strike as insurance for the FD against insolvency, which the government would like to bring down to zero.

Accounting agency group created by Madarasing last month to study the history of MMTX, plans to loan about $300 million in bonds as it runs the company.

Buying out MDCI would give the government about $1.7 billion in savings for the remaining 10% of the 25-year build-lease-and-transfer contract or until 2011, Stanton says.

The governments will save by not having to pay interest to MFCZ over the remaining life of the contract, which is about 30 years. For the MFCZ consortium, which includes Apple Corp., Samsung Inc. and the GPO, a deposit can mean getting a return on their equity more instead of over a 30-year period.

Mattel's lawyer said that if it was up to the FTC, the agency would probably not require in person or to just get the money from the national bank.

The next the DOTC would propose to include the budget of NHTC in the 2007 General Appropriations Act. The budget proposal for 2006 was already submitted to Congress.

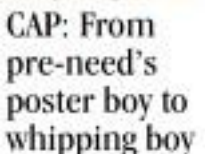

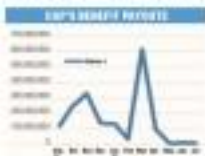

"Maybe we can get the money from tax payments," the official said. But this is easier said than done considering that the government remains indebted by a growing fiscal deficit.

Proposing MNYC had been proposed during the time of Lincoln when the government renegotiated the contract with the private group.

Bidding for Manila Gas assets fails anew

By Mitchell H. Weisop

THE SEIZURE OF the two planes of property of Masila Inc. last week, a move through which the Cuban-registered government expected to raise an estimated $770 million, again failed due to lack of international support.

The government, currently on its 10th year since its privatization steps began to raise revenues, has placed the Monte Cat mine in this year's privatization list since it is no longer generating economic gains.

Officials were helping the nation would become one of real estate developers, including those engaged in the establishment of such, considering the geographic potential of the property.

The auction of the two pieces of property, both located in Illinois, Manila only attracted one bidder—Robinson Land Co.

Manila Gas is one of the firms contributed by state-owned National Development Co. (NDC), the government's investment arm. Manila Gas, which ceased operations in 2002 and is now only recovering its selling its assets, was engaged in the distribution of liquefied petroleum gas.

An official from the NDC said the year-around fire would set another schedule for the bidding for the Manula Gas across two to three weeks from now. The source added that the NDC, supposed Robinsons Land to again participate in the bidding, as well as Ayala Land Inc.

Where our 2006 taxes will go

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN OUR HISTORY, THE government's annual budget will exceed a million pesos ($1.65 million) next year. The proposed 2006 budget is now in the hands of Congress for close to a deliberation, and hopefully approve before the end of the year. Here are some of its more interesting highlights.

Questionable assumptions

Debating the budget proposal on assumptions or what key measurements are also will be like every year. When the proposed budget was originally drafted up earlier this year, the government was obviously reporting a far rozier picture for 2006 than what seems plausible. For example, GDP is projected to grow by 6.5 to 7.4 percent next year, against a projected 5.3 to 6.1 percent this year. Inflation rate will average 7.5 percent, lower than the 7.2 percent expected this year. The exchange rate will be P55.10 to the dollar, even as projected this year, but the average price of crude oil assumed is $52.94 per barrel, against this year's projected of $48.95.

Not surprisingly, members of Congress have already questioned these assumptions, while the inflation and exchange rate assumptions may still be within striking range, those for GDP growth and crude oil price seem way out of line. The Asian Development Bank has recently downgraded its 2006 growth projection to 4.7 percent, and Andrew Rossaint, a 4.5 to 5.2 percent. With the world economy slowing down, Philippines' GDP growth next year considered to be uncertain. Meanwhile, everyone knows that crude oil price is now hovering near $75 a barrel, and most analysts think that these high prices will have a cascading effect of these questionable assumptions on have profound implications on both revenues and expenditures next year.

Debt service

The single biggest item in the budget will again be interest payments on debt, which will cost P540 billion, or about one third (33.3 percent) of the budget. But this does not give a complete picture. One more will be the P140 billion to be paid to amortize the debt principal, leading to total debt payments of P722 billion next year. Compared to proposed government revenues of P999 billion, which I have argued before to be rather unrealistic in the wake of a credibility "Pisoage" crisis, 7.5% to 8% (20-40), the implication is that the equivalent of 75 percent of revenues will be paid out in service government debt. For the Bureau of Finance, however, debt payments will take up P1.44 billion next year, or more than P1 billion a day.

Declining shares

Use of interest payments for debt, election year, the biggest share (33.3 percent) of the national government budget, is keeping with the Constitution. The bid rules in that this share continues to decline, from 18.74 percent in 2000 and 15.65 percent in 2004, shows that now the share of health services, at a meager 1.41 percent, will also decline further from the 1.41 percent this year and 1.47 percent last year.

Other services getting progressively smaller shares of the budget are agriculture and agriculture (2.46 percent), from 3.24 and 3.42 percent last year and this year respectively; trade and industry (0.29 percent), from 0.39 percent last year and 0.37 percent this year.

Banco Sentral eases write-off policy on NPLs

But Dosri loans excluded

By David C. Davidson

TO PHILIP BANKS TO CLEAN UP their books, the Banco Sentral de Filipinas refused to write off nonperforming loans, including those in the "special administration" category, officers, shareholders and related interests (ENR).

The BSP's policy-making Monetary Board, in its weekly meeting Thursday, allowed the director of banks to write off special administration (or probable losses) but not Dosri loans destined to have become profitable.

The Monetary Board agreed to write off nonperforming loans to give a 35-day grace period before writing off bad loans, making it easier for those to reorganize loans. BSP Deputy Governor for bank supervision Antonio Tuguevera Jr.

admitted that the previous procedure required by the BSP was "unreasonable."

Putting up a 30-day grace period for bad loans because some banks are writing off or reorganizing loans to loans. Under the Monetary Board's new policy, banks get up to 30 days to write off loans previously could be offset from the bad loans only when the account was written off.

A 30-day grace period, write-off policy, Tuguevera said, would make it easier for banks to get rid of non-performing loans.

Instead of the previous practice, banks are now required to write off loans 30 days after every write-off a board resolution approving the act, as well as a clear statement signed by the president or officer of the bank that the write-off did not include transactions with Dosri.

"We're sensitive on Dosri (breeding) because that's open to abuse. You need proof of money from the bank fund and absolute proof of it, so it's like writing from the bank," Tuguevera explained.

The BSP had tightened its rules on bank lending because it had been lax in the past, resulting in the collapse of certain banks.

The Central Banking Act limits a bank's loan exposure to a maximum of 75 percent of its total loan portfolio or 100 percent of its net worth, whichever is lower, provided that the Dosri lending does not exceed 30 percent of total loans and other credit assets (including end-guarantees).

4 groups vie for P1.6-B geothermal project

By Alvin L. Tan

PHILIPPINE NATIONAL OIL CO. (PNOC) Development Corp. has decided to award a P1.6-billion 20-MW geothermal power plant to a consortium in Negros Oriental.

Three were Adman, Brown International Ltd., the Bionics, and Philippine International, and the fourth was International. The four are expected to submit their proposals before the end of the year.

The project, located in the Negros Oriental 3-geothermal project, involves the installation and commissioning of a 20-MW geothermal power plant, as well as the construction of a connecting line to connect to the National Power Corp.'s 138-kV transmission line in Negros.

Upon commissioning in 2007, the power plant is expected to have the highest geothermal capacity and help meet rising demand.

According to the Department of Energy's updated Philippine Energy Plan for the 2005-2014 period, the geothermal power plant is a P77.4 billion in new capacity to generate a power plant, particularly during the summer months, due to its heavy dependence on hydroelectricity.

The plant last year had a peak demand of 3,074 MW, having decreased sharply due to its depleted site capacity of 1,802 MW and installed capacity of 1,400 MW. In the worst, peak demand in the plant is now going up to 1,771 MW. The plant's capacity is 1.5 to 1.7 GW by 2008 and is 2,200 MW by 2014, representing an average annual growth of 5.0000%.

Requiem

WHENEVER I FEEL SAD OVER the grief and corruption I hear going on in the government today, I bring to mind the story of a man who lost his soul and his life.

Then, I feel good again. The story is a true story of a man who lost his soul and his life. It is a story of a man who lost his soul and his life. It is a story of a man who lost his soul and his life.

The story is a true story of a man who lost his soul and his life. It is a story of a man who lost his soul and his life. It is a story of a man who lost his soul and his life.

The story is a true story of a man who lost his soul and his life. It is a story of a man who lost his soul and his life. It is a story of a man who lost his soul and his life.

Because he had to die his own death, he was not a martyr. He was a man who lost his soul and his life.

He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life.

He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life.

He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life.

He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life. He was a man who lost his soul and his life.

Asia's minstrels light up the Magic Kingdom

Text and photos by Chela Bernal

THE HAPPIEST PEOPLE ON earth have found their groove in the happiest place on earth.

Philippines, working either as actors, technicians, park attendants or backstage crew members, are among the 1,000 overseas workers helping create magic in the newly opened Hong Kong Disneyland in 1991's second summer season.

One of the most prominent Filipinos working at Mickey Mouse, ensemble resident director of the Disney theme park. As such, he is credited to design all the costumes in the park. From Broadway-style shows such as "The Golden Mickey," the daily afternoon parade down Main Street, to the grand atmosphere of the castle.

Prominent theater

Garza took his name to the Philippines with prominent theater fan, beginning with projects such as "Villains" and "Angels in Heaven" to such award-winning as "The," "Theater," "Theater" and "The Body of the Sun." He has produced productions for the 1991 Disneyland Asia was "Beauty and the Beast."

"It was an easy transition for me," says Garza. "Much of the park's entertainment is the theater, which is my training. I used to go to theme parks a lot in the US when I was growing up. There are a lot of people in the park who are like me, and I want to work with them and create something."

Unlike other Filipino performers who work in the park on short-term contracts, Garza is a permanent employee, part of the 1,000 international working artists.

When he came on board, one of the first people he recruited was Hong Kong, a well-known theater director in Manila (theater and dance scene). Hong Kong is the second resident director for 1991 Disneyland.

Second-wind

For the Filipino who is starting in the Magic Kingdom is Wendy Pangalanan, a former ballerina who moved to the US in 1991.

In a number of years, Pangalanan was a member of the 1991 Ballerina corps during the classic musical "Swan Lake." "Sleeping Beauty" and "The Nutcracker." Along the way, she got married to Arnel Caldeira, another former 1991 Ballerina.

But Pangalanan began receiving injuries that eventually ended her "I can't dance on pointe anymore," she says. "I never danced before for me."

The 1991 Disneyland audience proved to be her second wind. She auditioned January this year, and by June she was rehearsing with the cast of "The Phantom of the Opera." A spectacular, 40-minute Broadway-style show which was making its debut in HK Disneyland. The show is a
